Urban Outfitters apologizes for 'bloody' Kent State sweatshirt

From news services

Urban Outfitters apologized Monday after it received major backlash for trying to sell a "vintage" Kent State University sweatshirt that appeared to be covered in blood spatter.

The university was the scene of an infamous bloody demonstration in 1970, when four students were killed and nine others injured after the National Guard fired on students who were protesting the Vietnam War.

The university and many on the Internet criticized Urban Outfitters on Monday, saying the sweatshirt evoked memories of the shooting.

"This item is beyond poor taste and trivializes a loss of life that still hurts the Kent State community today," the Ohio-based university said in a statement on its website. "We take great offense to a company using our pain for their publicity and profit."

Urban Outfitters, which apologized on Twitter, sold the item for $129 on its website as part of an assortment of vintage clothing. It has since sold out. But it is being offered on eBay for a "Buy It Now" price of $2,500.

"It was never our intention to allude to the tragic events that took place at Kent State in 1970 and we are extremely saddened that Urban this item was perceived as such. The oneof-a-kind item was purchased as part of our sun-faded vintage collection," the company said on Twitter.
Outfitters

Monday and

Urban Outfitters said the red markings were the result of distressing and "wear and fray."

Kent State invited anyone interested in buying the sweatshirt to tour its recently opened May 4 Visitors Center, named for the date when Ohio National Guard troops opened fire on student protesters.

The university said a visit would help them "to gain perspective on what happened 44 years ago and apply its meaning to the future."

Alan Canfora, one of the nine people wounded at Kent State in 1970, said Monday he had spoken to family members of the victims and they are very upset at Urban Outfitters and do not accept the company's apology.

"This was a crass attempt at free publicity and a very morbid offering to stir up controversy," Canfora said.

Social media users on Twitter and Facebook assailed the brand for marketing the item, many saying it was in extremely poor taste.

"Urban Outfitters are selling a 'vintage' Kent State jumper," tweeted Cory Zanoni. "Nothing says 'hip' like murder."

Tweeted Kent State professor Chris Rowan: "Profoundly depressed to live in a reality where campus shootings get turned into a fashion statement."

Bad moves, Urban Outfitters

Urban Outfitters has attracted public criticism over controversial items in the past.

- » Earlier this year, the company issued an apology after criticism for selling a T-shirt with the word "depression" in a repeating pattern.
- » In May 2013, the retailer pulled a series of shot glasses and flasks that resembled prescription pill bottles after lawmakers said the items promoted drug use.

» In 2012, the retailer upset Jewish groups with a T-shirt featuring an embroidered, six-pointed star that was similar in appearance to the insignia Jews were forced to wear in Nazi Germany.

» In 2010, the brand sold T-shirts with the words "eat less" printed across the chest. Actress Sophia Bush, saying the shirts glorified eating disorders, called for a boycott.

Free transit for Hyde Park?

Tracy

Hyde Park residents and visitors may soon get a new method of transportation and it doesn't require a Ventra card-or any fare at all.

Officials from the 53rd Street Special Service Area, which funds services and programs with local tax dollars, are looking at starting a pilot program for a free trolley that would operate through the Hyde Park business district.

The group plans to test the trolley on Thanksgiving weekend and a weekend in December before Christmas, said Eric Reaves, the program manager for the 53rd Street Special Service Area.

The route and schedule still are being ironed out but the trolley is slated to run on Lake Park Avenue and 53rd and 55th streets, Reaves said. The trolley is intended for weekend use but could be expanded to weekdays, based on

There appears to be demand for transit options besides the CTA and Metra in the Hyde Park community area, which has loose borders of Washington Park on the west, Lake Michigan on the east, 51st Street on the north and 60th Street on the south. Reaves said he has heard from residents that it is hard to get around the neighborhood on public transit.

The CTA doesn't have any rail stops in Hyde Park, though buses serve the area. Metra Electric District trains stop at multiple points in Hyde Park as it connects Millennium Park to the south suburbs, but they don't run as frequently as CTA trains. The CTA did not respond to a request for comment.

In an August survey of 718 Hyde Parkers, 91 percent said they would likely use the free trolley, which would be paid for with taxpayer dollars. It is estimated to cost about $830 to operate the trolley for 10 hours. The 53rd Street Special Service Area is expected to discuss the survey results at 7 p.m., Sept. 24, at the Hyde Park Hyatt, 5225 S. Harper Ave.

Nearly 80 percent of survey respondents said they would use the trolley to run errands while 76 percent said they would ride it to restaurants. About 60 percent of respondents were younger than 40.

This would not be the first free transit service in Hyde Park. Every weekend last month, a free shuttle service operated in a loop through Hyde Park and Washington Park, making stops at several museums including the DuSable Museum of African American History, Frank Lloyd Wright's Robie House and the Museum of Science and Industry.

GO Airport Express shuttles provided the transportation, which was paid for by Choose Chicago, the city's tourism office, which gets most of its funding from state and local government sources.

The University of Chicago also operates a few Hyde Park area shuttles for its students, faculty and staff who have school-issued IDs. In November, the university began a shuttle between campus and 53rd Street and Lake Park Avenue. A university spokesman did not return a request for Em Hall, who lives near 53rd Street in Hyde Park, said 53rd Street is congested with vehicle traffic. She wonders how much time the trolley would save passengers, who may find it faster to walk than get stuck in traffic on the trolley on 53rd Street.

Though she wishes the trolley would travel to more places including farther south to 57th Street, she plans to try it during its Thanksgiving weekend test run.

"I think anything that brings alternatives to Hyde Park ... I'm all for it," said Hall, 34.

STATIONARY

A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note This week: Argyle Red Line

My first thought when the Red Line doors open at this Uptown station is always, "I don't want to get off at this station." The platform is very narrow and difficult to traverse. It's even worse in snow or slick conditions or when the stop is crowded. Thankfully, help may be on the way. The Argyle stop is one of four North Side Red Line stations the CTA is proposing for largescale renovations. The agency has suggested wider platforms and elevators to make these stops accessible for disabilities. The $1.13 billion project could begin as early as 2017, based on funding availability.

Riot Fest cleanup begins

By Leonor Vivanco I REDEVE

Riot Fest became a mud fest this year.

Just how much damage was done to Humboldt Park, home of the three-day music festival, still was being assessed Monday, according to the Chicago Park District.

But one thing was certain: It was difficult for concertgoers to avoid getting mud caked onto their shoes and boots after Friday's rain that helped transform the park into a sloppy mud pit through Sunday.

The fest site will remain closed to the public until at least Thursday, when officials will walk through the park to determine the extent of the damage and create a plan for repairs, park district spokeswoman Jessica Maxey-Faulkner said.

Riot Fest organizers are responsible for repairing any damage done to the site, Maxey-Faulkner said. A representative of the music festival couldn't be reached for comment Monday:

Last year, the cost estimate was pegged at $54,300, thanks in part to higher attendance and rain on the fest's last day. Final attendance records for 2013 weren't available.

This year, the fest's footprint was twice the size it was in 2013. The fest moved to the north section of the park roughly bordered by North Avenue to Division Street and California to Kedzie avenues.

The Tribune estimated 160,000 fans attended this year's fest over the weekend.

In August, officials estimated it would cost $266,000 to repair parts of the 115 acres of Grant Park where Lollapalooza took place. On Monday, upper and lower Hutchinson Fields remained fenced off for fixes, as they have been for more than a month.

Uptown homicide fuels concerns about gangs

By Rachel Cromidas | REDEYE

A fatal shooting in Uptown on Monday is fueling concerns about gang violence in the North Side neighborhood.

The shooting marks Uptown's third homicide of the year, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office.

At about 11 a.m., Christopher McGee, 22, was shot in the chest a block north of his home in the 4400 block of North Magnolia Avenue, authorities said. McGee was taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center in critical condition, where he was later pronounced dead, according to

Ald. James Cappleman (46th) said in a statement emailed to constituents Monday afternoon that the shooting was gang-

Cappleman said he has requested that police officers from the 19th District, which encompasses parts of Uptown, increase their presence in the area, which is a few blocks from the CTA's Wilson Avenue Red Line Station. Chicago police did not comment on the request.

But, Cappelman added in his note: "While more police presence helps curb crime, it's not enough.

"We need to do more and offer more alternatives for our youth in our community," he said.

To that end, Cappleman is organizing a "youth forum" with the help of local youth and community organizations. He said these groups will create a "plan of action" to address the needs of Uptown's at-risk youth later this year.

He also invited readers to attend his ward's open office hours from 5 to 7 p.m. Monday evenings to discuss efforts to further curb youth and gang violence.

September can be a time of increased gang activity, according to police officials, because the beginning of a new school year is sometimes accompanied by gang initiations and gun violence.

Uptown has seen several shootings this summer, including a Racine Avenue driveby that left three wounded, a July homicide and an August shooting near Clarendon Park that police officials also said was gang-related.

Trial set for cop charged in woman's death

Chicago Tribune

Trial has been set for next month for a Chicago police detective indicted on criminal charges that he recklessly opened fire at a group of people while off-duty, killing a woman.

Dante Servin has said he feared for his life after he saw a man point a gun at him not far from his West Side home near Douglas Park early on the morning of March 21, 2012.

But Cook County prosecutors alleged Servin acted recklessly by opening fire over his left shoulder from inside his car into an alley occupied by at least four people. Rekia Boyd, a woman in the group, was fatally shot in the back of the head, and the intended target was holding a cellphone, authorities said.

Servin was charged last November with involuntary manslaughter, reckless discharge of a firearm and reckless conduct. He was stripped of his police powers and is on paid desk duty pending the outcome of the trial, a police spokesman said Monday.

Judge William Lacy on Monday scheduled Servin's trial for Oct. 27. The judge, who presides at the Leighton Criminal Court Building, will decide Servin's guilt or innocence following a bench trial.

In a telephone interview Monday, Thomas Brandstrader, Servin's attorney, expressed confidence that his client would be acquitted of the charges.

"He did what he was he trained to do," Brandstrader said.

The veteran officer faces anything from probation to five years in prison if convicted of involuntary manslaughter, the most serious charge.

The city previously paid $4.5 million to settle a wrongful death lawsuit brought by Boyd's estate.

The Chicago Fire Department welcomed a new class of firefighters and paramedics during a ceremony Monday at Navy Pier. NANCY STONE/TRIBUNE

Guinea pig thief gets probation

Chicago Tribune

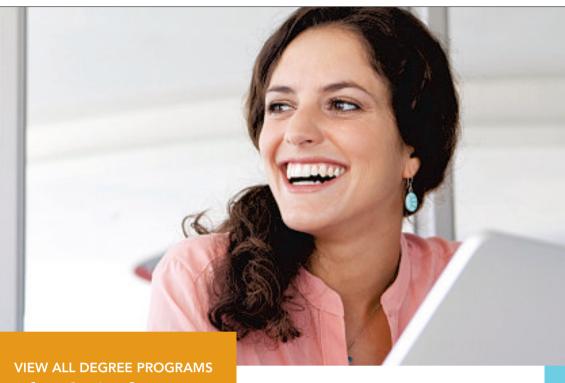

A Harwood Heights man was sentenced to 18 months of probation Monday in a case that began when authorities said the man removed a guinea pig from an apartment at a building where he works as a handyman.

Esmir "Sammy" Sabic, 37, of the 4300 block of North Newcastle Avenue, pleaded guilty to one felony count of criminal trespass to property in Cook County court. He originally was charged with residential burglary after he was accused of entering the apartment without permission to spray for bedbugs and removing the guinea pig in the process.

The fate of the guinea pig remains unclear, but the tenant has moved, authorities said.

Crews battle 11 major California wildfires

Crews battled nearly a dozen major wildfires across California on Monday that have forced hundreds of people to flee, destroyed dozens of homes and structures and charred thousands of acres of forest land left bone dry by the state's record drought. The most destructive of the 11 blazes, the Courtney Fire, quickly blackened 320 acres east of Yosemite after it erupted Sunday, burning several homes to the ground, according to the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

Some 1,000 residents in and around the foothill community of Oakhurst and near Bass Lake were evacuated ahead of the flames, which were 20 percent contained by Monday morning as California baked in a heat wave that drove temperatures into triple digits.

Further north, about 800 firefighters were battling a 3,900-acre blaze, dubbed the King Fire, raging in heavy timber and steep terrain in El Dorado County. Nearly 250 homes were under a mandatory evacuation order, while residents of another 400 houses were advised they could voluntarily leave, the county sheriff's office said.

Cal Fire reported one injury associated with the fire, which was 10 percent contained and spreading rapidly Monday, but further details were not immediately available.

Meanwhile, authorities near Los Angeles lifted an evacuation order Sunday as firefighters made headway against a 1,600-acre wildfire that forced hundreds of people to flee their homes as it swept through droughtstricken woods.

More than 1,000 firefighters backed by nine helicopters worked around the clock to contain the Silverado Fire, which broke out Friday in the Cleveland National Forest and spread rapidly Saturday.

A mandatory evacuation order affecting 217 homes in and around Silverado Canyon, a gorge in the Santa Ana Mountains, was lifted Sunday, though the area remained closed to non-residents, the Orange County Sheriff's Department said.

This year's wildfire season, which typically runs from May until October, was on track to be the most destructive on record, according to Cal Fire.

Elena Delle Donne has a simple but effective sales pitch. when it comes to the watching the Sky.

"Come see us play once and you'll be hooked," the star guard/forward said after the team's thrilling double-overtime playoff victory over Indiana earlier this month.

I know all about being apprehensive about watching the WNBA. When I first attended a game during last season's playoffs, I realized I had a misguided opinion about the women's game.

You could say I had a "Road to Damascus" moment.

Since then I've spent more time following the team, and I noticed a squad that embodies the league's fight for respect. The Sky, the WNBA's youngest team, made strides this season despite ups and downs.

Center Sylvia Fowles didn't play much early in the season after undergoing hip surgery. Also, Delle Donne was able to lead the charge in the postseason despite missing significant time due to Lyme disease symptoms and later dealing with back problems.

Even though the Sky took a step back in the regular season-finishing 15-19 after being the East's top seed in 2013-they made up for it in the playoffs. They got past Indiana, who swept them out of last season's playoffs, to become Eastern Conference champions.

Not bad for a group competing in the playoffs for the second time ever.

Chasity Melvin, who played for the Sky in 2007 and 2008, attended Game 3 of the WNBA finals between the Sky and Phoenix on Friday at UIC Pavilion. She said the popularity of women's basketball in Chicago has risen immensely since she retired.

"The Chicago Sky franchise of today as compared to years past when I played has grown into a more professional and organized WNBA franchise," she said. "One thing [that] hasn't changed and won't change with the WNBA is the die-hard fans that they have. Even though the venue had changed, players and coaches, I was still greeted by some of the same Chicago Sky fans."

Phoenix forward Candice Dupree, the Sky's first-ever draft pick in 2006, commented on the team's growth after the Mercury swept Chicago in the finals.

"It was a packed house in here tonight. That's great for the Sky," she said. "They get overlooked because there are so many other sports teams here."

TOP THAT

In 2013, the Sky finished first in the Eastern Conference before stumbling in the playoffs, the first postseason appearance in franchise history. This season provided redemption on several levels. Some of the milestones the Sky reached in 2014:

- First team to reach the WNBA finals with a sub-500 regular-season record (15-19)
- » First playoff win in franchise history (Aug. 22 at Atlanta)
- First playoff series victory in franchise history (clinched Aug. 26 at Atlanta)
- » First Eastern Conference title (clinched Sept. 3 at Indiana)

Even though the Sky lost in the finals, it won't be the last we'll hear from them.

After all, Chicagoans like a winner just like anyone else.

Tough break for Peanut

Charles Tillman may have played his last game of the season for the Bears, and maybe the last of his career. The team put the cornerback on the season-ending injured reserve list after he ruptured his triceps Sunday. He had signed a one-year deal in the offseason.

"I appreciate the kind words of encouragement and support from all the Bears fans who have reached out to me." Tillman, 33, said in a statement, "I know this feeling way too well, but this isn't the end of the road for me. As I rehab my injury, my role will transition to helping coach and support my teammates. I will be at Halas Hall and do everything I can to help our team reach its goals."

The news is better for Chris Conte. The starting safety left Sunday's game with a sprained left shoulder but might play Monday against the N.Y. Jets.

Alshon Jeffery

That's when Bears players Brandon Marshall, Alshon Jeffery, Ryan Mundy, Jon Bostic and Will Sutton will sign autographs to benefit the Jason McKie Foundation, which establishes scholarships for military dependents. The event will be held at the Lake Barrington Field House, 28156 Northpointe Parkway, Lake Barrington. For information, visit facebook.com/jasonmckiefoundation.

Peterson facing another charge

Minnesota running back Adrian Peterson, who is facing charges in Texas for child abuse in an incident involving a 4-year-old son, has been accused in a separate incident involving another 4-year-old son, KHOU-TV in Houston reported Monday.

On Friday, Peterson was indicted on charges of reckless or negligent injury to a child. That led to the Vikings deactivating him Friday for Sunday's game, but he was reinstated Monday. Now there is a report of a second incident. KHOU reported that it obtained information revealing that Peterson is accused of injuring another son while disciplining the boy.

FALL MUSIC PREVIEW

LADIES' SEASON

NICKI MINAJ, TAYLOR SWIFT AND MORE BIG HEADLINE SOUNDS ON THE WAY

By RedEye Sound Board

Have most of the year's major releases by female artists been stockpiled for the final four months? That's how it seems with records on the way from Rihanna, Taylor Swift, Nicki Minaj, Jennifer Hudson and Karen O. Somehow there's a Selena Gomez greatest hits album too, but we're going to pretend we didn't see that.

Add the highly anticipated full-length debut for Jhene Aiko and local dates for Kacey Musgraves, La Roux and BANKS, and male musicians (including Foo Fighters, Justin Timberlake and Chicago rockers Empires) will have to accept spending the rest of 2014 on the sidelines. Here are the upcoming records and shows we're excited about.

ALREADY RELEASED ALBUMS

Given that her band, the Yeah Yeah Yeahs, has been together since 2000, it's wild to think that "Crush Songs" will be singer Karen O's first full-length solo release. There's a lot that could happen here; recent Yeahs albums still rock, albeit a bit more quietly, while Karen's "Moon Song" for the "Her" soundtrack was nothing short of a lullaby.

Death From Above 1979, 'The Physical World'

If you want to get pumped for a workday, you can do no better than "You're a Woman, I'm a Machine," the 2004 debut from this danceable punk duo. "Trainwreck 1979" and "Government Trash," the first tracks released from the Toronto band's long-awaited follow-up, show these guys can still smash.

Jhene Aiko, 'Souled Out'

Perhaps best known right now for her backup work on Drake's "From Time," Jhene seriously busted out during a solid, rainy Lolla set. Based on Aiko's 2013 EP "Sail Out," expect "Souled Out" to deliver powerful, sultry lyrics that aren't overproduced like some other popular female artists (cough, Rihanna). p.m.

COMING SOON ALBUMS

SEPT. 16

Lia Ices, 'Ices'

I can't claim to understand much of the nature-based lyricism on Ices' gorgeous 2011 album "Grown Unknown." I can, however, say that I hope her third album provides the same kind of dreamy, reflective experience while making her the star she deserves to be. M.P.

SEPT. 23

Jennifer Hudson, 'JHUD'

A few new singles (including the sassy "Walk It Out") suggest the Oscar winner is going for a crossover R&B/pop sound on her third album.

ERNEST WILKINS

Empires, 'Orphan'

Chicago rappers aren't the only locals breaking onto the national scene. Following The Orwells and Twin Peaks, the journeymen rockers of Empires release their major-label debut on Chop Shop/Island Records, with first single "Please Don't Tell My Lover" suggesting an added danceability to the group's burly grooves and electric live shows. M.P.

SEPT. 30

Jeremih, 'Late Nights: The Album'

You're way behind if you think the Chicago R&B singer is nothing but "Birthday Sex." His new "Don't Tell 'Em" (feat. YG) already is enough of a hit to wonder if "Late Nights: The Album" will take Jeremih to the next level. M.P.

OCT. 7

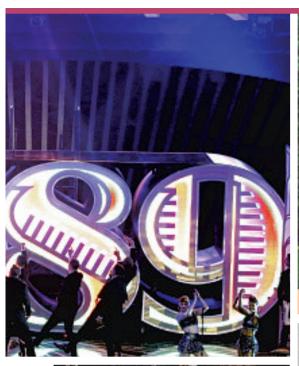

Betty Who, 'Take Me When You Go'

After a breakout year and appearances at big festivals such as Lollapalooza, the concentrated beam of pop sunshine known as Australian singer Betty Who makes her major label debut. Expect joy. Lots of it. E.w.

OCT. 21

Jessie Ware, 'Tough Love'

The delicate beauty of the British singer's 2012 debut, "Devotion," wasn't something that immediately grabbed busy ears without the time and patience to let Ware's incredible, icy voice wash over them. The trembling confessions of the slightly more energized "Tough Love" could solidify the artist as a force in the U.S. M.P.

Taylor Swift, '1989'

from "1989," earned a backlash so instantaneous it probably gave Taylor whiplash. She announced that this would be her first official pop album, but hopefully she'll retain the skillful country songwriting that brought her to

"Shake It Off," the first single/video were recorded in a different city (Chicago, Austin, Nashville, L.A., New York, Seattle, New Orleans and Washington, D.C.), and the Foos' eighth studio album will be accompanied by an eight-part HBO series. It would be nice if a burst of creativity accompanied the multi-locale approach: while the band still rocks, its recent

the top. D.M. OCT. 28

OCT. 27

Run the Jewels, 'RTJ2'

El-P and Killer Mike's self-titled debut as Run the Jewels effortlessly showcased the unexpectedly flawless pairing of two hip-hop heavyweights. Can these two, who simply demolished their mid-day Lolla 2014 set, possibly rise even higher? Can't wait to find out. m.p.

Lil Wayne, 'The Carter V'

Weezy claims this will be his final solo album. Whether or not his retirement holds up (we're guessing it won't), expect the usual appearances from labelmates like Drake and Nicki Minaj. E.w.

NOV. 10

Foo Fighters, 'Sonic Highways'

This album is brought to you by the number 8. Each of the eight songs on "Sonic Highways" releases have been a bit of a snooze. p.m.

NOV. 24

Nicki Minaj, 'The Pinkprint'

Will this FINALLY be the album on which Nicki eschews pop and commits to being the acidtongued rapper we know she can be? If singles "Pills N Potions" and "Anaconda" have anything to say about it, probably not. But "Lookin Ass" gives us hope. D.M.

NOV. 28

Eminem, 'Shady XV'

A celebration of his career, this double disc will be half-greatest hits, half-compilation album featuring Shady Records acts like Yelawolf and Slaughterhouse. E.w.

Rihanna, title TBD Fall 2014

She's back! Details are scarce so far, but you already know we can expect a reinvented look and a new single to jam to. E.W.

Kendrick Lamar, title TBD Fall 2014

Lamar's 2012 release, "Good kid, m.a.a.d city." was an instant classic, so all eyes are on his follow-up effort. We don't have many details yet, other than that he's recorded somewhere around 40 songs for the project. E.W.

Unlocking the Truth, Sept. 20 at Park West

You may be asking, "Who?" Here's all you need to know: They're a metal band consisting of pre-teens that rock harder than almost anything else out right now. E.W.

Sam Smith, Sept. 22 at Riviera Theatre

The British soul singer's debut album "In the Lonely Hour" arrived at No. 2 on the Billboard 200, and this show sold out a long time ago. Catch Smith (featured on Disclosure's hit "Latch") before he goes full stadium tour on US. E.W.

Kacey Musgraves, Sept. 27 at Riviera Theatre

Finally, Chicago gets a proper headlining appearance from the biggest young artist in country right now. She's fresh off a tour with the far less-talented Katy Perry, but that's no reason to think Musgraves will be anything but impressive and personable at the Riv. M.P.

Sept. 30 at Riviera Theatre

Sheezus! Expect a beats-heavy dance party when the poppy Brit hits town behind her femme-friendly album. D.M.

La Roux. Oct. 1 at Concord Music Hall

It's a massive understatement to say that "Trouble in Paradise," La Roux's follow-up to its 2009 self-titled debut, was worth the wait. The album is one of the year's best, and singer Elly Jackson should have attendees in a dance frenzy requiring them to put processing of the impactful lyrics on hold until getting home and cooling off. m.p.

Banks. Oct. 7 at Metro

She's been compared to Lauryn Hill and Fiona Apple, and her bleak, moody R&B has earned deserved buzz. Haven't heard of her vet? Get on that, E.W.

Echoing a time when girl group members dressed alike, Lucius offers style to spare in the Brooklyn act's live performances. Pair that with feminine surfer pop/rock, and you've got a group that's just damn cool. D.M.

Skrillex. Oct. 18 at Navy Pier

Confession: I expected nothing from the DJ's performance at Lolla. Ninety minutes of non-stop dancing later, I was converted. Sure, it's sorta silly for Skrillex to perform at Navy Pier—cotton candy with your wub-wub, sir?—but that will do nothing to minimize the thump as it takes control of your being. M.P.

Hozier, Oct. 26 at Metro

The Irish singer has one of those voices that can get away with anything. Good thing the songs (as heard on the EPs "Take Me to Church" and "From Eden" and Hozier's self-titled, full-length debut, out Sept. 19) do justice to the pipes. M.P.

Twin Peaks, Oct. 30 at Lincoln Hall

The recent "Wild Onion" marks a strong step forward for the young Chicago quartet, whose best songs deliver hooks that deserve to own a summer (and exploded from the Pitchfork 2014 stage). This release show should have no shortage of fully justified enthusiasm. $\mathbf{M}.\mathbf{P}\!.$

Kimbra, Nov. 1 at Lincoln Hall

While I still think Kimbra needs to work on establishing her identity, her stable of solid sounds should prove especially fun in the intimacy of Lincoln Hall. D.M.

FKA Twigs, Nov. 13 at Metro
Her recently released full-length debut
"LP1" already is shortlisted for one of the year's best, and many called her Pitchfork 2014 set a highlight of the weekend. Now's your chance to catch her sensual live show the way it's intended to be seen: with the lights down low. E.W.

Death From Above 1979, Nov. 25 at Riviera Theatre

The Canadian attack dogs disguised as a reunited rock duo brings its sonic assault to Chicago in support of the band's long-awaited sophomore album, "The Physical World." E.w.

Justin Timberlake, Dec. 8 at United Center

Between the "Legends of the Summer" tour with Jay Z and Justin's own solo jaunt, does anyone feel like we've been seeing ... too much ... of JT in the last year or two? Nah—the man is a born performer. D.M.

Her character might be unlucky in love on "Orange Is the New Black," but Samira Wiley is causing romantic waves in real life. Writer Lauren Morelli reportedly has broken up with husband Steve Basilone and is now dating the Netflix star, eonline.com reports. The two were seen hand-in-hand at last month's Emmy awards—they do make a pretty couple.

We need a vacation

But do we need a new "Vacation"? THR.com reports that Leslie Mann (right) is in talks to join the cast of a reboot/remake of the 1980s John Hughes movies. Ed Helms and Christina Applegate are already on board, and Chris Hemsworth and Charlie Day are other potential stars. The modern update will focus on Clark Griswold's son (Helms) and his grown-up hijinks. Expect lots of crotch-injury jokes.

THE QUOTE I know who wants what lunch, and I've done all the school paperwork and filled out the emergency cards. Ben [Affleck] doesn't know that stuff exists. He is in charge of laughter.'

-Jennifer Garner, to InStyle magazine, on the division of parental duties in her marriage with Ben Affleck. Make sure you get some fun times in there too, hon.

Spreading her wings

We learned some important things Monday when the full trailer for "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay-Part 1" landed its apocalyptic spaceship on the Internet. Some key scenes from the book, namely Effie sans makeup, Katniss making non-idle threats, Peeta under the Capitol's spell and the return of Finnick, all are included. There's also some strange exploding dam that we do NOT remember, but hev. when you're splitting one book into two movies, some things to have to be embellished.

In the Thicke of it

Robin Thicke's year just keeps getting worse, it seems. In a sworn deposition given earlier this year and revealed Monday in court, the "Blurred Lines" singer reveals that he was high on Vicodin and alcohol when he showed up at the studio to record the track, and had very, very little part in writing it. "I told my wife the truth. That's why she left me," he adds. Thicke, Pharrell Williams and co-writer Clifford Harris Jr. are involved in multiple lawsuits with the family of Marvin Gaye over the song.

> Here comes the Kaling? If things had gone Mindy Kaling's (left) way, "Bridesmaids" could have been a completely different movie. She revealed Sunday on Bravo's "Watch What Happens Live" that she auditioned for the role that eventually went to Maya Rudolph. "I practiced it so much and was so into it and I loved that whole cast," she said, while talking about how she's rarely called in to audition for movie roles. "That was one that was a heartbreaker." Was there not a bit part available? We're always down for more Mindy.
